

AVM Provides Creative and Reliable AV Solution for Kennedys New Sheffield Offices

Background

Kennedys is a leading national and international legal firm that specialises in litigation and dispute resolution. Its lawyers provide experienced legal advice on a range of industries including insurance, healthcare, employment and trade. Kennedys now employs over 800 people globally, across nine UK and seven international locations.

Solution

Kennedys required a state-of-the-art communications system which could enable reliable communication between clients and employees. The firm is currently in the process of deciding whether to proceed with videoconferencing, and therefore needed the office rooms to be able to accommodate any such future plans.

Benefits

- Audio system and user experience now simple and intuitive.
- Each room is fitted with individual LCD monitors.
- Technology both easy to use and easy to manage.

Outcome

A 52" LCD was fitted in each room, whilst in the Main presentation space a large format projection screen was installed. The main presentation room has also been installed with videoconference capabilities. In order to reduce the complexity of the project, AVM used wired ceiling microphone arrays instead of a wireless system. This provides the room with the same flexibility but also ensures that there are none of the issues associated with wireless audio technology during audio/video conference. In Open mode, a 'master' wireless touch-screen control panel will control all user required system functions. Another key difference in the main presentation space is the provision of a native 1080p High Definition resolution projection system with a 16:9 format screen to allow viewing of the highest quality content in all room configurations.
